MONTANA’S OLDEST MAN

(Excerpt of a Story written by Charlie Rossiter)

In 1952, Bill Clark, a reporter from Butte, traveled to the Ruby Valley to interview an old gentleman who was believed to be one of the oldest individuals (if not the oldest) in the state. Charlie McIntyre was that man and he lived north in a one room cabin with numerous dogs and a horse.

The man who ambles to the door may well be the oldest fellow in Montana, and maybe a lot of other states. That’s Charlie McIntyre, a matured black man, who came to these parts a long time ago from Franklin County, Tennessee.

When asked how old he his, Charlie scratches his snow-white hair and replies “to the best of my recollection about 116 years” He really doesn’t look that old but what does a 116-year-old man look like? After talking with Charlie for a while you start to believe that he might be that old. Charlie knows aplenty about this valley, and says he’s lived around here for “about” 77 years. Everything is “about” with old Charlie, because dates don’t mean much to him anyway. Herb Nesbitt, a second generation native, who was born and reared in Sheridan says, “I’m over 70 now, and I knew about Charlie McIntyre being in this country while I was still a young boy. He’d been here quite a while before that. I was raised around Sheridan (Herb lived in Brandon) and Charlie was more over towards Twin Bridges, working for the Seidenstickers’ and others ranchers towards Dillon. But I knew about him. Descendants of the late Col. John C. Seidensticker, one of the area pioneers in the livestock business, declared earnestly that Charlie McIntyre was here long before they can remember.

McIntyre couldn’t read or write but he could play the accordion with a flair and an ear for rhythm and harmony, which would make any kid 60 years his junior throw away their instruments with envy. He must be seen and heard to be believed at all. Charlie has only two props - the button type accordion and a home contrived gadget for keeping time. The latter “instrument” is half of a kitchen chair, one front and one back leg joined together by the rungs. The rungs curving outward make the contraption rock rhythmically back and forth beneath his left foot, after Charlie gets it set just so. Then he places the accordion on his left thigh, beats his right heel into the floor a couple of times, and takes off on the “Wabash Cannonball” or something similar.

Charlie couldn’t read sheet music and the tunes he picked up were from listening to somebody sing them but many came out of his old head. There was a time years back when Charlie used to roam the countryside, playing for barn dances and country hoedowns from Waterloo to Ruby Town. He was in great demand on Saturday nights throughout the valley and jammed with many of the area bands. When asked about his music he replied “Don’t need to half no fancy bands and such, what I don’t get out of my own head (he pronounces it hade) I just pick up heah and theah. This old accordion done got it all. All I gotta do is steer it.”

A lot of things about Charlie McIntyre are in question. Like his name, for example. He knows where he got the name McIntyre, but he doesn’t know what his true name ever was. Or where he was born. He is certain his parents must’ve been slaves in the deep South, but he never knew them.

“A white lady named of Ms. McIntyre bought me often a auction sale block when I was just a lill kid,” he says. “I grew up on a plantation in Franklin County, Tennessee. Which I was told that would be about 35 miles west of Chattanooga.”

Charlie grinned a toothless grin. “Maybe - on a map,” he suggested, “but you don’t know them Tennessee backcountry roads. After the first World War, I was back there on a trip to find my kinfolk. Took a heap a looken but I couldn’t fine nothing. Didn’t know my own name -couldn’t find no McIntyre’s. I come back west, and here I am. Guess I’ll stay now, I reckon.”

“We was going into Utah,” he says. “But they wouldn’t let Ms. McIntyre bring no colored people in, so we three fellows had to leave off and she went on. We three came North to Pocatello, but them other two fellows, they wouldn’t leave Idaho. I told him I was coming north to Montana, but they wouldn’t come. No sir. I come up to this here country, and this is where I’ve been ever since.”

After arriving in Montana, Charlie took a job as a sheepherder, working for old Col. Seidensticker, his son Fred, the Poindexter ranch, and many others. Over the years, Charlie became friends with many of the area folks. His pleasant personality endeared him to all that knew him and in time, he was able to purchase a small piece of property of his own. This was located about 4 miles north of Sheridan, on Wisconsin Creek. Charlie had a small placer operation there and netted a few bucks in gold which helped tide him over.

Weekly, Charlie would ride his horse into Sheridan, tie him to a fence post in Mrs. Darby’s yard on Main Street, and run his errands. After he finished he would return with his goods and tie them to his saddle and head home to Wisconsin Creek. Charlie was asked one time; “Do you like bear Charlie?” “Yeah, I like bear,” he answered pensively. “I’ll tell you how I like bear - from a far distance away, a far, far distance away.”

Charlie lived out his days in contentment and passed away in 1953. No record was ever found on when Charlie had been born but they figured it had to be prior to 1864. Charlie was notoriously funny and respected by everyone that had the opportunity to know him and all the local children adored him, He is buried in the Sheridan Cemetery.

The Cottontail Observatory is Open!
 Schedule for 2024 is:

DATE	START TIME
August 03	9:30 PM
September 07	8:30 PM
November 2	7:30 PM
December 28	7:00 PM

These are free events but donations are greatly appreciated. The weather plays a big part in these events, overcast skies block out the stars as does rain & snow, also winds greater than 15 MPH moves the telescopes. In such an event we will have an astronomical presentation that you can understand. Dress warm as it does cool down with these starting times. If we have clear skies the public night will start with a laser tour of the night sky, pointing out the constellations and some astronomical objects. After the tour we start viewing objects with telescopes.

Directions to the observatory from Twin Bridges go 3 miles on Hwy 287 towards Sheridan. Turn left onto, Wet Georgia Road (gravel), there is a sign on the fence (Cottontail Observatory 3 miles), you will go through 3 cattle guards, after the third cattle guard take the road on the left. Go 1 mile, through another cattle guard and take a right, you a have arrived at the Cottontail Observatory.
